

U.S. Pain Foundation Announces Launch Of New Website

An Innovative and More Interactive Platform for the Pain Community is Now Live

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. - Feb. 1, 2016 - PRLog -- With the growth of the organization's programs, team members and volunteers, U.S. Pain Foundation's Board of Directors is pleased to launch the organization's new and improved website. This new interface has an engaging new design to make each section more user-friendly.

"We are excited to provide pain warriors, caregivers, healthcare professionals and others with this innovative means of finding resources, information and hope," says Founder and President of U.S. Pain, Paul Gileno. "The launch of the new site signifies our successful progression as the leading patient-advocacy organization for the pain community."

Keeping its volunteers at the forefront of what Gileno describes as an inventive design, U.S. Pain's website provides easier access to information regarding the organization's involvement with advocacy efforts, programs and campaigns. Those who frequently visited the previous website can expect to see a complete overhaul within some of the new platform's sections; the homepage now features a photography slideshow with popular selections readily accessible. Picture of the organization's volunteers can also be seen throughout the entire site.

Informative features such as the 'Get Involved' or 'Advocacy' tabs, according to Gileno, will further leverage U.S. Pain's mission to educate, connect, inform and empower those living with pain while advocating on behalf of the entire pain community. Gileno is hopeful that the contemporary qualities found within the new website will result in positive feedback from U.S. Pain's members and volunteers. The finished product, he adds, will provide the opportunity to meet pain patients who can be supported and ensured by the organization that they are being heard and their pain, validated.

"U.S. Pain is a lifeline for many with pain," Gileno affirms. "We are a resource that offers support and hope, community and strength. Our new website reflects all of these traits that defines who we are. We are a grassroots minded organization and our volunteers are family. This new website is a tribute to them and all brave pain warriors."
